LEASE ASSIGNMENT AND SUBLETTING

Residential Tenancies and Rooming Accommodation Act 2008 (Qld)

Your rights when you need to transfer your lease or sublet your rental property

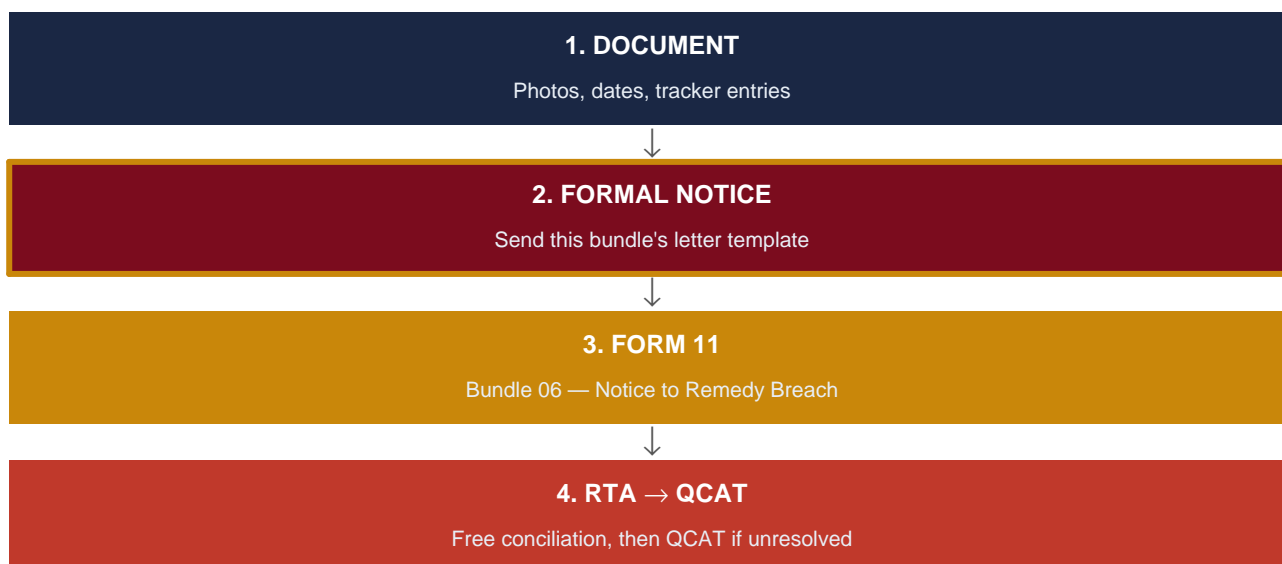

WHEN TO USE THIS BUNDLE

Use this bundle when you need to transfer your lease to another person (assignment) or rent out part of the property to a third party (subletting). This may arise when relocating, travelling, or when personal circumstances change.

KNOW THE LAW — LEASE ASSIGNMENT AND SUBLETTING

A renter may request to assign their lease (transfer the full tenancy to a new person) or sublet part of the property. The lessor cannot unreasonably withhold consent. If consent is refused without reasonable grounds, that refusal can be challenged at QCAT. Until the assignment is formally completed in writing, you remain liable for rent and any damage — never vacate or stop paying rent before it is concluded.

HOW THE SYSTEM WORKS — YOUR ESCALATION PATH

STEPS TO SUCCESS

Residential Tenancies and Rooming Accommodation Act 2008 (Qld)

01 Identify your proposed assignee

Ensure they are a credible candidate: stable employment, rental history, and the financial capacity to meet rent obligations. The stronger their application, the harder a refusal is to justify.

02 Prepare a complete application package

Prepare their rental application and at least two references. Attach these to the template when you send it.

03 Submit a formal written request

Fill in the template and send it to the lessor or agent. Request a written response within a reasonable timeframe (e.g. 14 days).

04 Document all responses

Log all communications in the Tracker. If consent is unreasonably refused, request the reasons in writing — this forms the basis of a QCAT application.

05 Do not vacate until assignment is complete

Until the assignment is formally completed in writing, you remain liable for rent and any damage to the property. Do not stop paying rent until it is concluded.

IF YOU NEED TO ESCALATE — WHAT QCAT CAN ORDER

QCAT can order the lessor to consent to an assignment where refusal is found to be unreasonable, and may award compensation for losses suffered as a result. The lessor's written reasons for refusal are a critical exhibit if you challenge it.

★ GOOD TO KNOW — ALWAYS GET REFUSALS IN WRITING

A refusal without stated reasons is difficult for a lessor to defend at QCAT and signals an unreasonable refusal. Always request written reasons — silence or a verbal no is not enough for them to rely on.

■ CRITICAL — CONSENT CANNOT BE UNREASONABLY WITHHELD

The lessor cannot unreasonably refuse consent to assign or sublet. If your proposed assignee meets standard rental criteria, refusal is unlikely to be defensible. Always get refusals in writing with reasons stated.

■ CRITICAL — YOU REMAIN LIABLE UNTIL ASSIGNMENT IS COMPLETE

Until the assignment is formally completed in writing, you remain liable for rent and any damage to the property. Do not vacate or stop paying rent until the process is fully concluded.
